Good (please pick one: morning, afternoon, evening, night), beautiful...thanks for reading about Irving's debut album Good Morning Beautiful. Released on Eenie Meenie Records, this candied collection of musicality and clever lyricism is bursting with eleven indie pop gems. From the animated hit "L-O-V-E" (co-produced by legendary producer Andy Paley, of Brian Wilson and Jonathan Richman fame) to the curiously infectious beauty of "Did I Ever Tell You I'm in Love With Your Girlfriend," Irving's sound runs the gamut of pop that is just plain good.

Irving's ability to create a variety of pop melodies and sounds, yet still keep the all-important album continuity, is not coincidental. All five members of the band wrote and sang lead on at least one song from Good Morning Beautiful, creating a five-part uniqueness unmatched in the depths of the indie world. This SoCal favorite has been "ba ba ba-ing" with the best of them since they got their start at a Los Feliz, CA art gallery gig. They switched keyboardists (Shana Levy left to start her own project, Let's Go Sailing, and was replaced by Aaron Burrows) before the release of the follow-up EP, I Hope You're Feeling Better Now, but the band never missed a beat.

Irving continues to be a Southern California favorite, live and on record, and the band is making moves to bring their energetic, yet effortless pop sound to the demanding international masses. Good Morning Beautiful is just what a pop album should be: part saccharine, part kick in the teeth, but 100% fantastic.
