Born as a side project to Robert Schneider's internationally renowned pop band, The Apples In Stereo, Ulysses finds Schneider shunning the 60's retro sound that long defined his Apples collective for an infectious ten songs of primitive, drone pop.

Gone are the boy-girl cooing and Beatles-esque musical canvases found on The Apples In Stereo's Her Wallpaper Reverie or Fun Trick Noisemaker. In its place is Ulysses' 010. Schneider's voice pulsates a harder edge, melding a powerful blend with the undulating guitars of "Push You Away" or the driving drums of "The Falcon." The result is the quintessential break up album, foot stomping melodies and insightfully bitter, yet simple lyrics. The chorus on "Television" is telling: "I want to show you this / I'll spit it out somehow / It's gonna make you pissed / Because you will see I'm better off now."

010 is ten tracks of powerful indie pop, spearheaded by one of the genre's most revered names taking a different direction - one that is sure to please both his existing fan base and those who will hear his unmistakable voice for the first time with Ulysses.
